From a note in the Bolingbroke Collection: Dated 1900

About 50 years ago it was the custom for the sellers of Ballads in Norwich to carry large linen banners hung on poles, upon which were pinned copies of each ballad. As the Ballads were sold, they would replenish their banners from their stocks at home. The last regular seller of Ballads in Norwich had, however, a stationary 'pitch' in Castle Meadow. His Ballads were pinned on long sheets of linen fastened to poles, which he leaned against the boundary railings of the Castle Gardens, opposite Fletchers Works. Although often very coarse, the Ballads afford much information concerning the life of the poorer classes at the time of their publication.

From the typed 1930 Index to the Ballads and Songs:

Index of Ballads and Songs in the Bolingbroke Collection at the Stranger's Hall, Norwich.

These ballads are the remains of the stock of the last regular seller in Norwich, who had a stationary 'pitch' on Castle Meadow. His ballads were pinned on long sheets of linen fastened to poles, which he leaned against the boundary railings of the Castle Gardens, opposite Fletcher's works. About 75 years ago it was the custom of the sellers of ballads in Norwich to carry large linen banners on poles, on which were pinned copies of each ballad. As the ballads were sold, the sellers would replenish their banners from their stocks at home.
